

Having the grass looking well and have it like the...

STEPS OF STAIRS

Now I have to say, mine never looks like that...

But I will aspire to get there that's all I can do.

Well that's one of the things that we agree about around the table. None of us would be focusing on managing grass if we felt we weren't going to benefit financially from it.

And the first thing that, when I started to become aware of grassland management, in the back of my mind was, well, that's a huge extra cost. And I'm not in a situation where I can spend all that money.

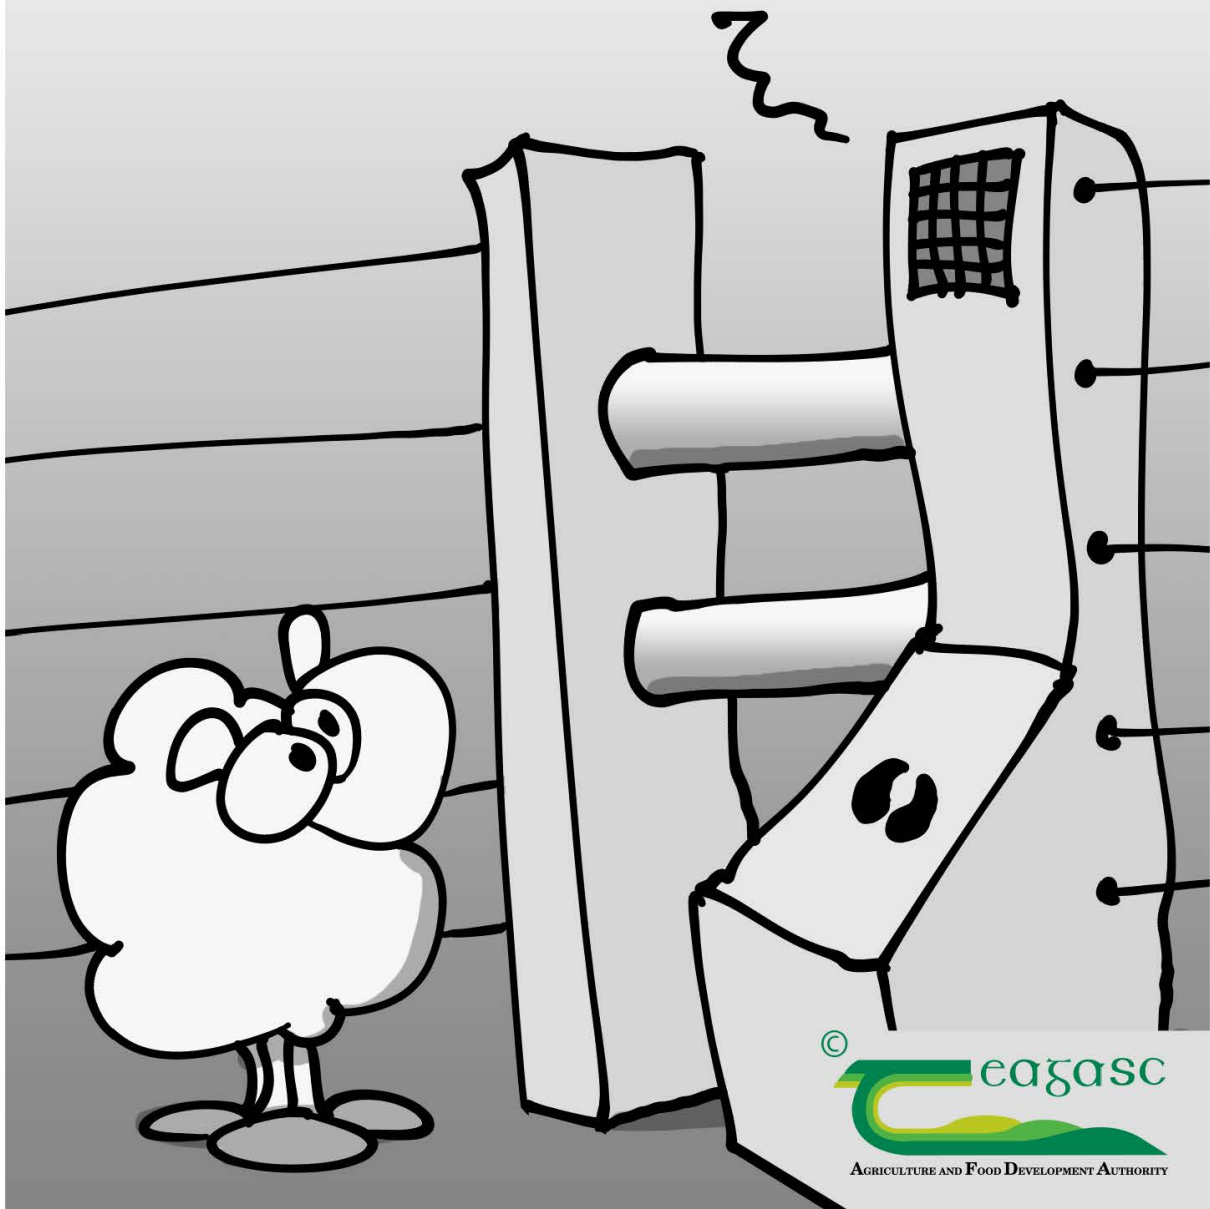

But in fact grassland management need not be an expensive fencing paddock system... Half a dozen pigtaails and couple of reels and good fence does wonders.

And, I think, it's something that people may be put off by... Simply by presuming that they have to spend a lot of money on a water course, or water systems and fencing and all the rest of it. So you can do it cheap and cheerful and it can be effective.

Reseeding shouldn't be seen as the only show in town. And even old grass sods are seen to improve dramatically by good management. You can actually improve the bottom line, simply by dealing with what you've got. And that certainly was brought home by the people in our group.

It needn't cost the earth to have good grass management. That's what we've got there.
